

HTMLElement three properties

| | |
|--------------------|--------------------------|
| ☰ Tags | Tools |
| 🕒 Created time | @April 23, 2023 10:37 PM |
| 🕒 Last edited time | @April 23, 2023 10:38 PM |

`innerText`, `innerHTML`, and `textContent` are all properties of the `HTMLElement` object in JavaScript.

`innerText` returns the visible text contained within an element, while `innerHTML` returns the HTML content of an element. The difference between `innerText` and `innerHTML` is that `innerText` returns only the visible text without any HTML tags, while `innerHTML` returns the complete HTML content of the element including any tags.